Children who are not in school and forced to work at various hours of the night and early mornings, are at a higher risk of exploitation, abuse and human trafficking. If you are thinking about sending your child out to beg or go across the border for work, consider the risks first. Children should be in school and should not be working below the age of 15.

As an adult you should also be aware of the risks. Know the phone number and location of your job. Do not give your passport to strangers and know the laws of migration where you are going.
